Needless to say, there has been great anticipation for the 2010 Homecoming Rally. It is being held today in the Big Gym as always. There has been much hype surrounding this rally, especially since this is the first rally of the year. Spirit Week has been filled with lunch time activity games, spirited dress up days, and not to mention the recognized DJ Vick One dropping the hottest beats during lunch to pump us up for the Homecoming Dance.

This year's theme is the Justice League or superheroes in general. Seniors have been assigned to dress up as either Superman or Wonder Woman, juniors as Batman and Cat Woman, sophomores as Flash Gordon and Jesse Quick, and freshmen as Aquaman (and his fishy friends).

We should expect the usual homecoming rally events that we all know and love to take place, such as, football's Nitro chant, and the class spirit competition. Also to be expected is the obstacle course contest between the classes.

The Homecoming Court will be announced at this rally in the traditional fashion along with our newest version of the hilarious Homecoming Court kidnapping video, which turns out to be a great hit every year. This rally will build up the excitement for the Big Game tonight and also set the tone for the Homecoming Dance.

SPRIT WEEK

Pajama/Crazy Hair Day

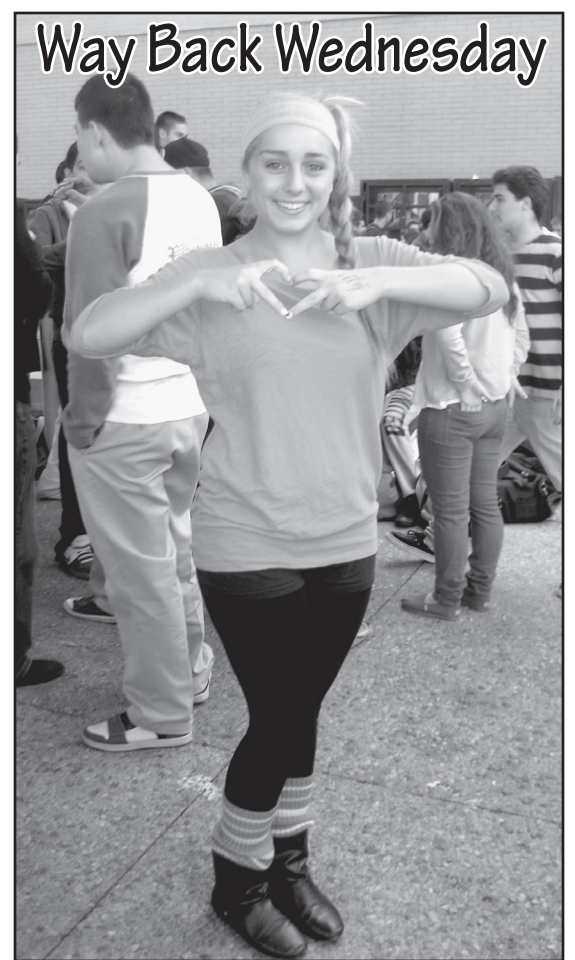

With all the sleepy, bed-craving students we have wandering the halls of Glendale High; it's not a surprise that Pajama Day is as much of a success as it is. Not to mention the outrageous hairstyles we see on a daily basis, except, on this day, they are over-exaggerated just a tad.

Plaid/Preppy Day

Ties, plaid skirts, and collared shirts filled Glendale High as students excitedly showed off their preppy looks. It was a nice change to see our spirited classmates dressed professionally rather than the everyday casual attire. All the preppy outfits around campus surely brought out a lot of pep as well.

Way Back Wednesday

Surely, a new tradition has been established this year with the new and creative Way Back Wednesday idea. Students eagerly came to school flaunting their best '70s, '80s, and '90s outfits. There's no doubt that this dress up idea will continue to fill a day in Spirit Week for many years to come.
